

INDUSTRIAL MARKET OVERVIEW

JOSHUA YURASITS, Research Analyst

The industrial market in the Philadelphia region has witnessed a consecutive four-quarter increase in vacancy, primarily attributed to several key factors. This quarter, absorption amounted to 2.2 MSF, marking a significant decline from the modest 7.9 MSF absorbed in Q2 2023. Meanwhile, new construction deliveries remained steady at 13 MSF. Consequently, the vacancy rate increased 69 bps. Nevertheless, with a slowdown in construction activity coinciding with a sustained demand for industrial space, it's clear that the Philadelphia region is poised for an uptick in absorption in the near future. Overall, these trends underscore the enduring strength of the region's core industrial locations, reaffirming its trajectory of sustained growth in Q4 2023 and moving into 2024.
